FROM PRESIDENT CHUCK!

It is with great pleasure that I comment on our 2014 Reunion and Annual Meeting held on September 11-12 at the Hope Hotel in Fairborn, Ohio. We welcomed over 100 members and guests for the Thursday evening reception and dinner. Everyone had a good time renewing friendships and reminiscing. We also observed a moment of silence to remember those who were lost and injured in the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

At the Annual Meeting, I discussed our declining membership, deaths, and non-renewals. Greg Jump, our Treasurer, reported that we remain quite viable financially. You members elected our newest trustee, Janet Morris, and re-elected returning trustees George Ellis and Barb Miller. Your trustees are very committed to going forward as long as possible!

After our business session, we were very encouraged by an outstanding update on NCR strategy by Bill Van Curen, VP and CIO. Bill was pleased to be with us for our reunion, as well as a reunion of his own with family. We are very grateful to NCR for financially supporting the reunion, and for bringing Bill to us for this special event.

Shortly before lunch, a distinguished lady, Betty Darst, appeared in our midst and mingled with us. After lunch, Betty presented an extraordinary portrayal of Katharine Wright, sister of Orville and Wilbur. Betty received a standing ovation. When she was finished, several members went to the National Museum of the USAF for guided and self-guided tours.

At our annual planning meeting on October 13, we welcomed Janet Morris to the Board. Greg Jump returns as Treasurer, Ken Carr as Secretary, and Don Barmore is your new Vice President. And yours truly is honored to return as President. We also welcome Mike Freeman back as a Trustee for one more year.

As we approach Thanksgiving, I'd like to note three things for which I am truly thankful: 1) The great team of trustees, our wonderful administrator, Sue Schweitzer, our meticulous newsletter editor, Steve Wicinski, and our impressive webmaster, Lesley Baumann; 2) Your very important contributions beyond your membership dues; 3) Your ongoing input and support. Share your newsletter with a fellow retiree and help us to recruit and retain new members!

We wish you all blessed holidays and a safe, healthy 2015.

IN-THE-KNOW TIDBITS . . .

NCR QUOTE OF THE QUARTER . . .

"Airplanes are interesting toys but of no military value."

Marechal Ferdinand Foch, Professor of Strategy, Ecole Superieure de Guerre, France

DID YOU KNOW?

SUBMITTED BY KEN CARR

The following was forwarded to me by Dan Taylor, a member of the NCR REA Board of Trustees. I have no idea who the author might be, but I'm sure he or she would believe that the NCR REA is the perfect audience.

Senior citizens are constantly being criticized for every conceivable deficiency—real or imaginary—of the modern world. We do know, however, that we take responsibility for all we have done and we do not try to blame others.

However, upon reflection, I would like to point out that it was NOT senior citizens who took:

The melody out of music

The pride out of appearance

The courtesy out of driving

The romance out of love

The commitment out of marriage

The responsibility out of parenthood

The togetherness out of the family

The learning out of education

The service out of patriotism

The Golden Rule from rulers

The nativity scene out of cities

The civility out of behavior

The refinement out of language

The dedication out of employment

The prudence out of spending

The ambition out of achievement

God out of government and school.

And we certainly are NOT the ones who eliminated patience and tolerance from personal relationships and interactions with others!

And, we DO understand the meaning of patriotism, and remember those who have fought and died for our country.

Just look at the Seniors with tears in their eyes and pride in their hearts, as they stand at attention with their hand over their hearts, as the American Flag passes by in a parade!

YES, I'M A SENIOR CITIZEN!

I'm the life of the party..... even if it lasts only until 8 p.m.

I'm very good at opening childproof caps.....with a hammer.

I'm awake many hours before my body allows me to get up.

I'm smiling all the time, because I can't hear a thing you're saying.

I'm sure everything I can't find is in a safe, secure place, somewhere.

I'm wrinkled, saggy, lumpy, and that's just my left leg.

I'm beginning to realize that aging is not for wimps.

Yes, I'm a SENIOR CITIZEN. And I think I am having the time of my life!

NCR IN THE NEWS ...

NCR Helps Restaurants Integrate Apple Pay

Source: QSR Magazine (Reprinted with NCR's permission)

NCR Corporation, a leader in consumer transaction technologies, enables more than 485 million consumer transactions per day across retail, financial, travel, hospitality, and small businesses, globally.

The company's latest integration of Apple Pay is important to the industries NCR serves as it drives forward mobile payment technology, and with it, the ability for more secure digital payments and enhanced digital marketing capabilities. NCR will help enable its customers' ability to integrate and accept Apple Pay, the highly secure form of payment, through brick-and-mortar channels using traditional POS, and through mobile commerce channels using mobile device apps, and, perhaps most importantly, the intersections between those POS systems and mobile apps.

"With Apple Pay, Apple has transformed mobile payments and will have an impact on the industry like never before. We are thrilled to be working closely with Apple to help retail and hospitality customers integrate this new method of payment into their operations, providing an easy, safe and secure way to pay with a single touch," says Jimmy Fortuna, vice president of product development and chief technology officer for NCR Hospitality. "We believe Apple Pay and Apple's extraordinary reach among consumers will further enable NCR to create business-transforming innovations for our customers."

NCR pivoting from hardware into software, services

Source: Atlanta Business Chronicle (Reprinted with NCR's permission)

NCR Corp., the 130-year-old inventor of the cash register, is transforming into a technology and services company. It's a pivot many industrial giants, including IBM Corp. and GE, are making to stay relevant in the digital age.

Duluth-based NCR is spending billions of dollars in developing and acquiring high-margin software, applications and services, as consumers change the way they shop, bank and travel.

"Consumers are much more flexible in terms of where they are going to connect, transact and interact," NCR's chief information officer, Bill VanCuren, told Atlanta Business Chronicle. "The whole mobility trend requires us to now provide solutions that can be rendered to the consumer regardless of where they are physically located. NCR needs to be at the forefront of that interaction between the consumer and the merchant."

Hardware still accounts for the lion's share of NCR's $6.2 billion in 2013 revenue. But software and services, which generated nearly $1 billion last year, is where the puck is headed. Software-related revenue grew 45 percent in the first quarter, including software-as-a-service (SaaS) revenue growth of 242 percent.

"It is our goal to become more of a software and SaaS company," VanCuren said. "Right now we are in the Top 50 software companies in the world."

The shift to high-margin software is likely to help NCR's bottom line as margins are higher.

"Software is writw once and use many [times]," VanCuren said. "You write the software, and you can deploy it as many times as you can download that software."

To help muscle into the software and services business, the hardware maker has gone shopping. In 2011, NCR acquired software maker Radiant Systems Inc. for $1.2 billion. Last year, the company paid $1.65 billion for mobile banking firm Digital Insight Corp. and $791 million for retail software firm Retalix in 2012.

NCR is adjusting as merchants replace cash registers and point-of-sale (POS) systems with flexible and hip tablet computers and smartphones. In the financial sector, customers are doing more banking electronically and skipping a trip to the bank branch.

“Financial services, retail and hospitality are two very large lines of business within the company that have big investments and R&D initiatives focused around the mobility of the consumer,” VanCuren said. “It’s an opportunity to expand our business beyond traditional POS and kiosks.”

Some of those opportunities include developing applications and software that can work across multiple hardware platforms and operating systems such as Android and iOS. NCR is also developing applications — such as boarding passes and concert tickets — for the nascent, but potentially massive “wearables” market. NCR said it is trying to stay ahead of that curve.

Consider the Interactive Banker — NCR’s response to modern banking. The two-part solution includes an advanced financial services kiosk that can complete as much as 90 percent of typical branch transactions. The second component is branch software installed on tablet PCs, freeing employees to roam the branch and assist customers as they conduct transactions on the kiosks.

On the retail side, NCR is helping its retail clients combat “showrooming” — where consumers try a product at a brick-and-mortar store, but buy it online, typically from Amazon.com. In a patent application made public in May, NCR said it’s developed a technology that will let retailers deliver customized offers to shoppers who are in their stores as the shoppers search on their mobile devices for competing prices.

The technology “gives physical retailers an opportunity to compete with online retailers and win over price-sensitive consumers while those consumers are in the retailers’ stores. This can give the physical retailers a chance to reinvent themselves, creating more competition and better value for consumers,” NCR says.

The technology works by identifying if a product or similar product is in inventory at the store, determining if the price is within a predetermined range of a best price available from comparison shopping, and deciding if the price can be reduced to the predetermined range. If a price match is unrealistic, the technology calculates alternative offers, such as determining how much a consumer may need to spend to get the price match on other goods within the store

Using software, NCR can remotely keep tabs on Internet-connected devices, reducing maintenance downtime and boosting customer satisfaction.

There are 485 million transactions daily that pass through NCR’s consumer transaction technologies, such as mobile applications, airline check-in kiosks and ATMs. The company monitors that data to predict when the devices might fail, or when parts need replacement. Technicians know the history of the failures, can predict what might fail next and what subcomponents might need to be replaced, based on the amount of transactions processed, VanCuren said.

NCR also relies on Big Data to help its sales force customize product configurations, while supply chain uses it to forecast orders from a myriad of suppliers.

“Given the complexity of our product line, it has a lot of parts, and a lot of combinations and permutations in the product design,” VanCuren said. “So, we’re using Big Data to help customers pick and choose configurations that have worked well in the past or are standard for the industry.”

As NCR’s product lines pivot, so does its workforce. “In a hardware-centric company you have board designers, hardware designers,” VanCuren said. “In a software industry you’re building capabilities and work flow and functionality that requires a lot more flexibility and portability across hardware platforms.”

On July 23, Atlanta Business Chronicle reported NCR planned to cut jobs in its hospitality and other business units. NCR confirmed the cuts July 29, noting it will ax about 1,800 jobs, with a potential add-back of up to 900 of those jobs over the next 12 to 24 months. Add-backs will occur in higher-growth, higher-margin areas of the business, mainly in engineering and sales.

“As we enter the second half of our fiscal year we are implementing a restructuring plan focused on reallocating our resources to our highest-growth, highest-margin opportunities; in essence, aligning our resources to the realities of our transformed revenue streams,” NCR Chairman and CEO Bill Nuti said in a statement. “This is the right time for NCR to take this step now that we have the operational assets we need for the future, and have had time to assess the impact of our acquisitions and organic investments ... As a result of this restructuring program, NCR will achieve run-rate savings of approximately $90 million per year by 2016.”
